MÓNICA ALEJANDRA RAMIREZ

Wildlife Biologist - Primatologist

PROFILE:

Dra. Ramirez is a Biologist from Universidad de Caldas with Master's and Doctorate degree from Universidad de los Andes. She has more than 13 years of experience in planning and developing research projects in ecology and primatology. Between 2016 and 2020, he co-directed the project "Rehabilitation and reintroduction of Colombian Woolly Monkeys" with Dr. Pablo Stevenson. She has participated in the development of strategies that avoid or mitigate environmental impacts through reforestation and environmental management programs. She is a founder and active researcher of Fundación Fauna Libre, a dream come true in which the motor has been the love for primates, the forests, and the desire to contribute to their conservation.
